He will take command of the five-masted schooler Louis, now en route to Knappton, as soon as she shall have loaded again at the Knappton he scanned carefully every face that the way up from the Golden Gate and passed him in the rush of business there, until he caught the eye of Martin Foard himself. The two looked at each other steadily for a moment, and then drew together as men will who that the tug Pioneer has arrived there are half convinced they know each

The stranger put the usual inquiry under such conditions, "Is this Martin Fourd? and Mr. Fourd gave the necessary assurance, whereupon the unknown grasped him by the hand and declared himself, to Mr. Foard's infinite amazement. He was John Holtum, a playmate and schoolmate of Foard's in the old German home, years and years ogo, and the warmth of the friendly recognition and the swift passing of multitudinous questions back and forth between the two, can better be imagined than described.

They two, and their brothers, were born and raised in the town of Hardeslev, Germany (then belonging to Denmark), and all have been separated for forty-five years or more. They talked and re-talked the days of old, the peo ple of old, and the changes that have come to them in the scores of years they have been assunder, and they never
